alamBatu - Spa

The immersion into water is a cleansing ritual in most religions, for water is the most powerful and at the same time the most calming element. According to the Hindu legend, a beautiful goddess gathered Tirtha (holy water) from the sea and when she drank it she became immortal. Lakshmi, the Hindu goddess of fortune, stepped out of the water and while doing so, the rivers changed course and flowed towards her.

The massage house has been built below the temple that guards the land with its gods. Here massages, body-scrubs and spas are offered. Natural ingredients like papaya, sea salt, coconut, honey, milk or nuts are incorporated into the treatments.

Treatments

Most people love to be touched. Touch is definitely the most personal of all sensations. The Indonesians probably understand this better than many other nations. Many western societies only allow body contact on a personal basis, while the Indonesians touch each other constantly: Walking hand in hand, arm in arm or caressing each other is completely natural for Indonesians.

The Indonesians express their sympathy through their hands, and through massage they pass it on to their relatives during their whole life. Many Indonesians intuitively possess a sense for inflamed, cramped or swollen body parts, which they soothe with the help of their hands and essential oils.

Traditional massage

This traditional full body treatment has been practiced on the Islands of the Gods for hundreds of years. It combines acupressure, long soothing strokes and the benefits of pure essential oil to stimulate circulation, alleviate muscular and joint tension, bringing a sense of wellbeing, calm and deep relaxation.
